Trademark & Copyright Litigation

In addition to its standing as leading forum for patent litigation, the District Court of Delaware hears intellectual property disputes involving copyright and trademark infringement actions. Morris Nichols has represented entities seeking to enforce copyrights as well as defend against claims of infringement in subject areas ranging from musical compositions to online advertisements and architecture blueprints. In the trademark area, Morris Nichols has litigated disputes related to corporate trade names, as well as cases involving product marks and trade dress, for products and services ranging from vitamin packaging to cartoon characters.
